Logline

Meet Eland Stribling (AKA @blackstevesrwin), a wildlife biologist, stand-up comic and fly fisherman based in Denver, Colorado. Eeland loves to fish and he loves to tell jokes. He's passionate about wild places and the comedic lens, but also forthright in his endeavors to pursue outdoor education for conservation purposes. Follow along as Eland blends a unique mix of comedy, stewardship and environmentalism in Punchline, a film meant to teach us the importance of laughter as we protect the places we live and we love.

About The Alliance Member

Eeland Stribling is an angler, educator, wildlife biologist and a stand up comedian born and raised in Denver Colorado. He has a passion for conservation and comedy and advocates for outdoor education. Grew up learning about wildlife and ecosystem services with his grandfather who was also a wildlife biologist. He picked up flyfishing by learning to tie flies first, in college, then taking those flies he created to the local waterway of Denver to fish for carp. Eeland graduated with a degree in Fish, Wildlife and Conservation biology. No one in his family was outdoor"sy" besides his grandfather so Eeland created his own path to be in the outdoors.
